Accusation

Author's Notes:
Day two of the thirty-day drabble challenge!

Geddy froze into place as the parlor light snapped on. He slowly turned to look at his mother, perched in her easy chair.

"So. You come home."

"I'm sorry I'm late, Mama."

"Where you been?"

"With my friends."

She scoffed. "I think there's a girl, no? A bad kind of girl you don't bring home to Mama?"

"No, Mama, I swear, no girl."

"Feh. You go to bed. We talk tomorrow."

Geddy nodded and beat a hasty retreat to his room. He lay on his bed and closed his eyes, imagining Alex's face, and smiled. No, Mama, there's no girl.
